Section 1:

Scattered Matter Reassembling

The Sun evaporates us animals, plants, rivers and oceans into clouds; then rains us back down into new stations in this world's pecking order.

I

The basic natural laws of the universe never change. Consistently and forever, matter abides automatically by those natural laws. Within those laws, matter does what matter does; and what matter does is what it is now doing: It is attracting or accumulating combinations of matter and repelling combinations in the manner that we call “growth and decay.” (While a particle of matter is being repelled from one combination, it is automatically being moved toward another combination that it will eventually meet.) Thus, the matter contained within our world is in the eternal process of assembling, disassembling, and reassembling its many ever-flowing particles; for example, it’s evaporating, condensing, and evaporating again continuously (see Law Of Cyclic States).

Law Of Cyclic States: While varying proportional to the speed and proximity of its particles to each other, the liquid that changes to a solid must return to its liquid state before changing to a gas, then must change back to its liquid state before again becoming a solid, and must repeat the cyclic process while forever abiding by the Law Of Same Conditions; ocean water, at a specific temperature, must become clouds at another specific temperature, before becoming fresh water at still another specific temperature; then, it must return to the ocean water to be re-evaporated in the same way forever. The perpetual system(s) of matter in motion will forever repeat these among other states cyclically, due to the Law Of Circulating Matter and the Law Of Same Conditions:

Thanks to the Sun, evaporation occurs and the water of eternal life is forever recycled through its various states. (See the Law Of Circulating Matter and the Law Of Same Conditions.)

II

Matter, contained within our universe, is as the faces contained on a set of dice: always repeating the same combinations (see Law Of The Rolling Dice).

Law Of The Rolling Dice: Two dice (each with six faces that contain one spot on one face, two spots on another face, three spots on another, four on another, five on another and six on another) will never reveal, on their combined faces, any number that is less than two spots or greater than twelve spots, but will continuously repeat all possible combinations between two and twelve, in all possible sequences, while the dice are being rolled continuously.

Further, no one can destroy or end the movement of any particle of matter, as it continues forever uniting and reuniting with other combinations of particles. Therefore, after you die (decompose), your many particles of scattered matter will eventually reunite with the combination of particles that now form you. And, like a reassembled machine, you will again be in proper working order. I base my assumption of the re animation of your consciousness (caused by the recombined human bodily matter) on the unchangeable natural law stated in this Law Of Same Conditions:

Law Of Same Conditions: Same conditions produce same results. Also, all things (as two standard dice with spots) will repeat same conditions, due to a limited chain reaction of material causes and effects; within the cycle of matter in motion, the previous cause had produced the current condition, and the current condition is the cause or reason for the upcoming causal condition, and so forth. With all things, as with dice, limited same conditions are connected to specific recurring results. For example, some of the limited same conditions that are connected to the two standard dice are: they each must contain a certain limited quantity of spots on each of their faces to produce a certain limited variety of combined quantities of spots; they must be rolled continuously to land continuously; they must each land at a certain angle on a certain face at a specific speed, and so forth, to land on and reveal a certain combined quantity of spots, etcetera. Further, the condition that creates the potential causal condition is the existence of the dice and spots in motion (or the existence of matter in motion). Therefore, the same conditions, as well as the Law Of Same Conditions, come into existence and continuously recur only because of what's stated in the Law Of Circulating Matter. (See the Law Of Circulating Matter and the Law Of The Rolling Dice.)

Law Of Circulating Matter: Material particles in random motion within the same container (attracting and repelling each other, accumulating or combining and disassembling from each other) will constantly repeat all possible combinations; the basis for the phenomenon and Law Of Cyclic States and of the Law Of Same Conditions where, for example, liquid turns to a solid, then back to a liquid before turning to a gas and back to a liquid repeatedly in a cycle and varying proportional to the speed and proximity of the particles to each other. (See the Law Of Same Conditions, the Law Of Cyclic States, and the Law Of The Rolling Dice.)

III

Even now, with each breath, your body's matter is in the process of being reassembled; at this very moment, it's scattered in many places and is in the process of moving back to you.

Your matter is sitting on the grocery store shelf waiting for you to buy and eat. It's in your refrigerator and on your kitchen shelf. It's in the farmers' fields, on the trees and vines, waiting for someone to pick and ship to you; it's on the trucks and boxcars, at this very moment, moving toward the produce market and closer to you. Your matter (the matter that belongs to you) is in the rivers flowing toward your kitchen faucet, and in your faucet pipes waiting to enter your glass; it's in the oceans being evaporated into clouds, and in the rains falling from the clouds into the rivers flowing to your faucets; it's in the rains falling in the farmers' fields and entering the fruits and vegetables that people will pick, ship, and sell to you who will eat and digest; plus, it's elsewhere moving closer and closer to eventually reunite with the rest of your indestructible, everlasting, ever-flowing matter.

And as it leaves your body when you exhale, defecate, urinate, perspire, cry, bleed, flake, and so forth, it reunites elsewhere in its flow, but is never destroyed, and will eventually return again as your scattered matter now returns to you. (See the Law Of Scattered Matter and diagram, below.)

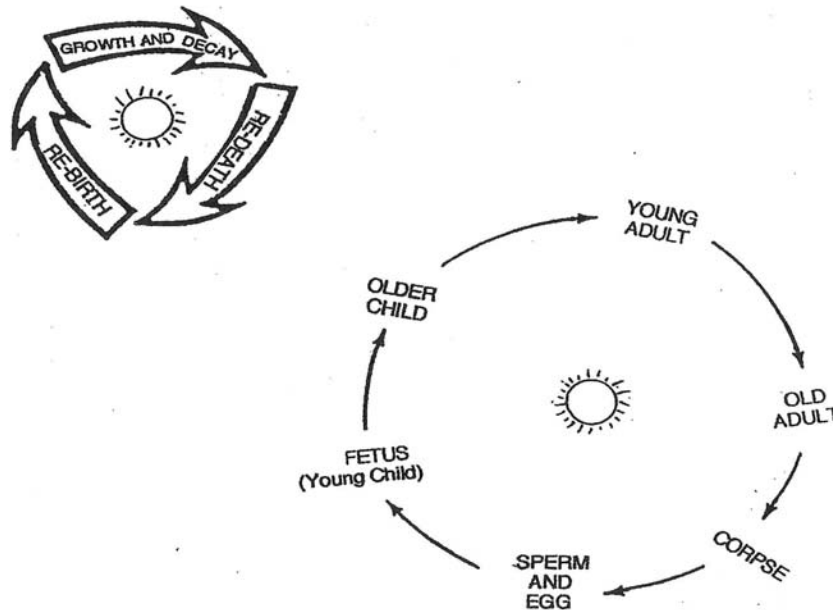

The cyclic repetitions of the varying material combinations (above), that form within the Law Of Scattered Matter, will always abide by these as well as other laws: The Law Of Circulating Matter, the Law Of Cyclic States and the Law Of Same Conditions.

Law Of Scattered Matter, or Law Of Reincarnating, or Of Everlasting Life: All bodies must be created - or rather, re-created - by way of scattered matter reassembling; then it must be disassembled and re-scattered to other reassembly points, and back to repeat reassembly continuously always. As a particle of matter moves away from one combination of particles, it must automatically be moving toward another combination. As it is in the process of disassembling, it is automatically in the process of reassembling, repeatedly forever.

Yes, The Sun evaporates us animals, plants, rivers and oceans into clouds; then rains us back down into new stations in this world's pecking order.

And as the matter always moves, and the body always reassembles while abiding by the Laws Of Scattered Matter and Of Same Conditions, this is the forever recurring resultant phenomenon illustrating the eternal cycle of the body's everlasting, ever-flowing matter:

Yes, The Sun evaporates us animals, plants, rivers and oceans into clouds; then rains us back down into new (often lower) stations in this world's pecking order.

Therefore, if you or anyone else set a utilitarian pattern, you may eventually become a victim of it when you reenter the world as a helpless infant; or you may have a stroke of bad luck in this current life and fall victim of the currently advocated utilitarian ethics. (Surely, a few - not all - of the most influential Jews of Nazi Germany had supported the rise of Adolph Hitler's utilitarian ethics and later became victims of the utilitarian extermination camps.)

Sometimes we forget, but whether it's in this current life or later in the next incarnation, consequences always happen - always in the now. (See the Law Of Zero Humanity.)

Law Of Zero-humanity, or Law Of "Sub humanized-class" Victimization Patterns (Resulting From Utilitarian Ethics), 101: The pattern of experimental abuse repeats within decaying classist civilizations, almost always beginning with animals, then spreading to the most helpless humans (such as minorities, infants, patients, illiterates, the mentally ill, and other scapegoats), then spreading further to the middle classes and finally to the upper-classed population's off-spring who are expanding outward from the circle's ever-expanding center, toward the lower classes whom they will eventually displace. (See illustration below)

Legend:

Further, as you can probably see from the above diagram, a rich legislator can pass an anti-poor people's law; then, after passing the law, the legislator can die and be reborn into the abused population of endangered lower classed poor people. Because the Sun evaporates us animals, plants, rivers and oceans into clouds; then rains us back down, either into new (often lower) stations in this world's mean unjust pecking order, or into a mutually owned future paradise of soothing fellowship (elevated to the state of true equality) that we each can begin building now. Yes, you can create a world filled with Hitlers that you'll experience in the now; or you can begin (now) to cultivate a world of people like the late great Mother Teresa, Reverend and Mrs. Fred Jordan (of Fred Jordan's Mission in L.A.), Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and Jesus; a world of people who will greet you without the cannibalistic thoughts of aborting your reentry into the wonderful new future world; people who will not kill your newly formed helpless little body and steal your tissues or organs for utilitarian purposes. For, there's no reason why we can't mutually and sanely begin to build a secure paradise filled with unselfish givers who are always automatically receiving the good from each other. (See the Law Of Reciprocal Prosperity.)

Law Of Reciprocal Prosperity: When two people are giving to each other, both are receiving; when everyone is giving to everyone, everyone is receiving. For example, when starving writers teach non-readers to read, the new readers will have a reason to buy their books. Further, if the starving writers teach their new readers how to prosper they will have customers who can now afford to buy more books. And, thus, the starving writers will prosper. Also, it is wise to give to those who are needy - even though you'll possibly never see them again in this incarnation. So, to receive compensation, tell the stranger to pass the giving spirit to other people (by giving to someone else) and "The repayment will eventually return to me, because: what goes around comes around." Then, hand him or her a copy of this illustration and say, "Also, if you pass something bad to someone else, it's like passing it to me, too. For, it too will come around to me, as well as back around to you":

To promote the giving spirit among adults, reward the givers; it causes others to seek rewards by giving, too. To promote the giving spirit among your children, reward the givers. Acknowledge and compliment each child for unselfishly giving to someone each day. Give the child an extra helping of dessert at dinnertime, or something else desired. The idea is to create and maintain the good habit and tradition of reciprocal giving. And teach them to find and reward other unselfish givers, so they will be giving and receiving with an ever expanding group of new unselfish friends.

Section 2:

Why The Modern-day Church Was in Error About Immortality

Many of today's preachers are not at fault in their well meaning, but erroneous, interpretations of some of the Bible's accounts. I believe that the church of old once possessed these universal truths about the hows and whys of immortality but forgot them naturally, little by little, with each new generation. For, surely, if the Biblical Jesus was truthful - which I honestly believe he was - then he must have known and even spoken of the Law Of Scattered Matter that existed then as it exists now and forever. But, though I realize this, I realize that I - and all other preachers and teachers - can't honestly speak for certain about those distorted times, because of these laws:

Law Of Limited Memories: As no one knows the details of the future, no one can remember the details of the past beyond the date of his or her own birth into this current lifetime. So, beware of the person who doesn't say probably or possibly and who speaks authoritatively about a time that precedes his birth into this current incarnation (preachers and history teachers, they who don't admit it's merely hearsay, are to be included within that group of liars).

Law Of Concealed Revelations: When something is revealed, something else is automatically concealed; when something is concealed, something else is automatically revealed. For example, when you moved an object from a space, you revealed a view of the space that it had covered or blocked; yet, you concealed a new space where the object now occupies. And, in so doing, the space that is "out of sight" eventually becomes out of mind (forgotten), as the space that is "in sight" is in mind (remembered). Thus, forgetting occurs automatically while remembering.

Many so-called "Christians" of several denominations are expecting a super-natural, mythological Jesus (who rose from the dead in three days) to suddenly appear in some spectacular way, as we once thought (during childhood) that Santa Claus would appear on an airborne reindeer-powered sleigh. But this expectation is because of dishonesty. Though part of the modern-day Bibles' miscommunication about certain revelations is due to translation loss, part is due to outright dishonesty - not necessarily the dishonesty of well-meaning Bible writers. (See the Law Of Truth Distorting Myths.)

Law Of Truth-distorting-myths, or Law Of Principle-distorting-myths: The falsehoods of myths replace the truths of actual events and consequently, can conceal the authentic principles of life. For example, as people have mythologized men from Amen Ra to Hercules to Elvis, it is possible that the Romans (who mythologized Romulus) removed Jesus from his tomb and caused well-meaning people to lie and perpetuate the myth of Jesus returning to life in the mythical three-day manner. And consequently, they caused a distortion in the understanding of the truthfully advocated Law Of Scattered Matter or in the understanding of the reason why we all have everlasting life. For, now the myth occupies the place of the principle advocated (and a person can believe in only one concept at a time: either in the distorted myth, or in the actual unchangeable principle that exists even now, unchanged by time). But, still, with disregard for truth, some people who perpetuate myths will replace the word "truth" with the word "faith" and justify their ignorance of eternal laws, such as, the Law Of Circulating Matter; or they will attempt to incorporate these precious eternal laws into their adamant stances in favor of those mythological beliefs that perpetuate the distortions of truth.

Axiom:

You can mistakenly have faith in falsehoods as easily as you can have faith in truths.
--

But, even if there was no dishonesty and no translation losses, still, the veil of distortions naturally occurs with all documents, due to this law:

Law Of Distorted Evolved-language Accounts: Always, as time passes, word definitions will change and automatically distort accounts of past actions; historical accounts are distorted automatically as the language evolves and word definitions change. For example, the word "gay" once meant "joyful" and not "homosexual". Then it evolved to mean "homosexual". Consequently, the old generation of non-homosexuals (heterosexuals, such as, Sam Cooke and Nat King Cole), who in the pre-1960's era, wrote, sung and taped proclamations of their gayness (not meaning homosexuality), will be mistakenly viewed by the new generation of historians as homosexuals proclaiming their homosexuality.

Yes, this kind of language distortion is also partly the reason for the establishing of so many opposing splinter denominations in today's church. Groups of people who disagreed with the Biblical interpretations of those in their former congregations broke away and formed their own. This process is still occurring due mainly to the Law Of Distorted Evolved-language Accounts and to this Law Of Multiple Definitions:

Law Of Multiple Definitions: A word containing multiple definitions will always cause misinterpretations, disagreements and, in some cases, it will perpetuate unjust prejudices. For example, the words "Black" and "dark" are used to describe pigmented skinned wooly haired people; yet, the same words are used to describe evil, e.g., dark humor, or a black mark on ones record, etc. Note: No color or hue is evil; for, a color is merely a color, and a hue is just a hue. And all colors and hues (same as all things) contain both positives and negatives and should be honestly defined by what they actually do.

So now that you know and if you are honest, then these truths should aid you in your sincere movement toward an even greater understanding and freedom.
